One-Day National Level Seminar on
*Literature, Language and Artificial Intelligence: Use, Role and Ethics

Date: 3rd March, 2026

Introduction and Rationale

In alignment with the quality enhancement initiatives advocated by NAAC, the Department of English proposes to organize a One-Day National Level Seminar focusing on 'Literature, Language and Artificial Intelligence: Use, Role and Ethics'. The seminar aims to strengthen academic engagement, promote research culture, and encourage interdisciplinary perspectives among Undergraduate students and faculty members.

The study of AI and Literature-Language enables learners to understand how literature and language can incorporate Artificial Intelligence with the use of technology to strengthen and enhance literature-language studies by not losing the creative and critical faculties of human mind. Such academic engagements are essential for developing technologically sensitive, critically aware, and socially responsible graduates, as envisioned in NEP 2020 and NAAC quality benchmarks.

This seminar directly contributes to curricular enrichment, student-centric learning, and faculty academic development, thereby supporting continuous quality improvement within the institution.

Objectives of the Seminar

- Enhance conceptual understanding of Artificial Intelligence
- Encourage Undergraduate students to engage in research-oriented learning
- Provide exposure to current literary trends and critical perspectives
- Facilitate academic interaction among students and teachers
- Support IQAC initiatives for academic excellence and best practices

Target Group

- Undergraduate students of English Literature and Language
- Students and Faculty members from English and other foreign language Departments
